Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun. WASHINGTON CITY, May 9th.

You have doubtless heard that a personal rencontre took place on Saturday after-noon, between Messrs. Wise and Stanley, of the House of Representatives. The following are the particulars, and may be relied on as correct. About 4 o'clock, Mr. Wise and Mr. Stanley were riding on nearly opposite sides of the road, looking at each other, their horses in a walk; a gentleman, acquainted with both the members, was a little in the rear. This position was maintained by the parties for some seconds, when a carriage came up and passed between Messrs. W. and S. After the carriage passed on, they resumed their former positions, when the gentleman al-luded to above rode up and commenced a conversation with Mr. Wise, on the subject of the race. Mr. Stanley, then, not keeping pace, fell a little in the rear, and Mr. Wise and his friend got considerably in advance before passing the outer gate. After proceeding about one hundred yards from the gate, Mr. Stanley rode rapidly up, just as they were passing through a mud hole; his horse brushed against Mr. Wise and his horse, on the left, with such force as to push Mr. Mr. Wise's horse against the horse of his friend, and jarred Mr. Wise in his seat, at the same time bespattering Mr. Wise with mud and water. As soon as Mr. Wise recovered from his jostle, and before Mr. Stanley had proceeded twenty yards, Mr. Wise rode up to him (Mr. Stanley) on his left, in a gallop, and on coming up with him, Mr. Wise struck him a heavy blow directly across the back of the head, with a black whalebone walking cane, which broke below the head, and the piece with the head flew off some distance. Mr. Wise struck him but one blow, and remarked, "Now, damn you, ride against me again." Mr. Stanley remarked, "I did not see you," and Mr. Wise replied, "then I excuse it." Mr. Stanley, after a pause of a few seconds, said, "you come up behind a man to strike him." Mr. Wise replied "there are gentlemen behind here who see how the matter is done," or words to that effect. Mr. Stanley then observed, "You come up behind a man and strike him like a damn'd coward." Mr. Wise replied, "Take that blow and the coward and make the most of them, damn you." The gentleman who had been engaged in conversation with Mr. Wise, now rode up, and said, "Gentlemen, the public road is no place to settle such matters." Mr. Stanley observed, "very well," and rode on briskly towards the city.

STRAYED.

Linneus, Linn county, a BAY MARE, 5 or 6 years old, with a light sorrel horse colt, foaled this spring. The mare has black legs, mane and tail, about 14½ hands high, with a small star in her forehead, and I think some white specks on her belly. The colt has considerable white in his face, and his tail somewhat white. The mare was raised in Saline, and is most probably there or in Chariton county. I will be obliged to any one for information concerning her, and will compensate for any trouble. I will be found at Fayette.
